The Council on Foreign Relations published an article on June 3 warning that the closure of the Strait of Hormuz had reduced tanker traffic by more than 95 percent, disrupting millions of tons of fertilizer shipments each month. The piece said Middle East urea prices remained 75% to 108% above pre - conflict levels and cited FAO estimates that cereal producers could face income losses of up to 5% in 2026. The warning is that fertilizer disruption now can reshape agricultural output through 2027.
