Fertilizer Daily reported on July 17, 2026 that a urea price rebound split the global nitrogen market from the start of July, lifting Egyptian FOB values to a peak of $448 per ton while ammonium sulfate stayed weak, citing China Chemical Industry News data reported by SunSirs. Algerian FOB urea peaked at $471 per ton over the same period. The rally was driven by short-covering and fresh import demand, with Europe the main engine as granular urea prices firmed. France's nitrogen subsidy covers straight nitrogen but excludes ammonium sulfate, shifting demand between nitrogen products.
