Times of India reported on July 21, 2026 that global urea prices fell 40 percent in June to USD 572 per tonne after a May spike, but remained 45 percent above the USD 395 per tonne level seen in June 2025. The report cited government data and said the decline was mainly due to partial lifting of Chinese export restrictions and fading fears of prolonged war - induced supply disruptions. Diammonium phosphate, potash and phosphoric acid prices remained higher than a year earlier, sulphur was 265 percent higher and ammonia 95 percent higher.
