Corteva Inc. disclosed its intended nine - person board of directors for the standalone, publicly - traded crop protection company that will result from its planned separation in the fourth quarter of 2026. Greg Page, retired Cargill chairman and CEO, will serve as Independent Chair, and Luke Kissam, named future CEO, will join the board effective at separation. Most current Corteva directors will remain with the crop protection company, while four directors (Karen Grimes, Marcos Lutz, Charles Magro and Kerry Preete) will resign immediately prior to the spin - off to join the board of Vylor Inc., the seed and genetics business that will become an independent public company. The new board includes agricultural and industrial leaders such as Klaus Engel, David Everitt and Christopher Policinski.
