The APVMA announced on June 9, 2026 (via a Special Gazette) a formal reconsideration of chlorpyrifos - methyl, an organophosphate grain protectant distinct from chlorpyrifos which was phased out last year. The review targets potential toxic impurities in the active constituent plus risks to worker health, dietary exposure, the environment and international trade; six registered products are affected (five grain - protection products and one insecticide). Public consultation on scope runs until September 8, 2026, with a 42 - month reconsideration timeframe commencing at consultation close. Several export markets already restrict grain treated with chlorpyrifos - methyl, creating trade barriers for Australian grain.
